

ADVANCE NOTICE

Mission:

Health Issues Centre Inc. aims to improve the health outcomes for Australians, especially the disadvantaged. Its principal activity is to promote the prevention and management of disease by developing and disseminating information on more effective consumer-centred health care.

Our role is:

To work with consumers and health care providers in Victoria and health policy-makers at all levels to ensure that consumers' perspectives are included and valued. This is achieved by undertaking research, policy analysis, information provision, and training and support for both consumers and health care providers.

Call for contributors to a special edition of Health Issues Centre Journal on safety and quality

The deadline for articles is Friday, 6 February 2009

We encourage you to consider submitting an article, opinion piece, letter to editor or review on an aspect of quality and safety that is of interest to you.

The Health Issues Centre Journal welcomes articles from Australian and international contributors that critique health issues from the consumers' and carers' perspectives and or report on and provide analysis of current state, national and international developments. Past editions of the journal can be accessed at www.healthissuescentre.org.au

The Journal has an Editorial Committee that assesses all contributions and a set of guidelines for authors that are available at http://www.healthissuescentre.org.au/documents/detail.chtml?file_name_num=204565

We hope that you will consider submitting an article for the edition on safety and quality in health care. If you would like to discuss your ideas or wish to express interest in making a written contribution to the Journal please contact Lauren Cordwell on (03) 9479 5827 or l.cordwell@healthissuescentre.org.au
